WHOLESALE

Fall 1926

Spring 1927

Everyone loves the rich and delicate colors found in the Japanese Irises and our fields of several acres containing hundreds of thousands of blooms this year have presented one of the most fascinating sights to be found anywhere.

For years we have been growing seedlings and selecting out the most distinctive and worth-while ones for introducing under names to our customers and we take pleasure this season in offering a collection of seedlings which have been named during the flowering season this Summer.

Delivery can be made during the Fall or next Spring.

CULTURE

Our experience leads us to believe that the Japanese Irises should be planted in well-drained situations. While they like plenty of moisture during the growing and flowering season, they do not like to stand in water, or especially where water would stand on the roots over Winter.

The roots can be planted early Fall or during the Spring. If planted in the Fall, we recommend a light mulch to keep them from heaving by the action of the frost.
